

FIRST TUNNELS

the growing season just got longer

Growing undercover

A First Tunnels Polytunnel with new sliding doors extends the growing season and opens up a whole new world of gardening possibilities!

A FIRST Tunnels Polytunnel can transform your garden, creating a valuable micro-climate – whatever the weather outside. Sunshine works harder to generate extra warmth, damaging winds are kept at bay and tender plants are protected from frosts – a gardener's dream!

First Tunnels has a prestigious line-up of customers using its Poly tunnels including organic gardeners Bob Flowerdew and Alan Titchmarsh plus TV chef Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall. The company has even supplied the Eden Project, the Natural History Museum, BBC, ITV and Sky.

Traditionally, when choosing a polytunnel, the big decision for gardeners to make is "What size do I want?" But now there's another important factor to take into account: "Which doors do I want?" It may not sound like an issue that warrants a lot of thought, but it's a choice that will affect the day-to-day management of a Poly tunnel.

New for 2010 from First Tunnels are sliding doors, an option for any Domestic or Commercial model of Poly tunnel. It's easy to see the advantages of sliding doors over hinged ones. Not having to leave

"Sliding doors free up valuable space"

an area for doors to open freely into the Poly tunnel opens up valuable ground space for access and growing even more plants.

Sliding doors also give gardeners greater control over ventilation, which means the doors have no need for a ventilation netting panel, so there's no need for a roll-up polythene blind!

Of course, sliding doors are just one of a host of benefits of a First Tunnels Poly tunnel.

Gardeners' workloads are reduced. Crops grow faster and stronger. Yields are higher – and all at a fraction of the cost of a conventional greenhouse.

That's why they're perfect for domestic gardens, allotments, schools and smallholdings – a value-for-money way to transform any land into a prime growing environment.
